"They Have Not Died"

How strange it seems. They've gone away!
These men who were our teachers true.
The mighty Hand that rules the day,
Saw fit to call them from our view.

They hasten back from whence they came,
With problems solved; with souls at rest.
Though treading paths unknown to fame,
They visit realms where sleep the blest.

The lessons taught point out their worth.
They left their mark as all men should.
Until we go from on this earth,
We'll feel their influence for good.

And after all, that unknown way
Leads but to rest where land meets star.
There is no death; but past the bay
They'll find what all life's secrets are.

How strange it seems. They've gone away!
These men who were our teachers tried.
But still they light us through the day;
Their lives, our guides; they have not died.

STANLEY LEWENBERG '28.

Kenneth L. Godkin

A devoted teacher is one of the greatest sources of inspiration that a school can furnish to its pupils. Such a teacher was J. Kenneth Godkin whose death occurred January 16, 1929, at Sunmount, Tupper Lake, New York, where he had been living for several months, waging a losing battle against tuberculosis. Always brave and cheerful and hopeful, he fought to the very end, confident that he would regain his health and return to the work that he cared for so much.

Mr. Godkin was born in Hartford, Connecticut, September 8, 1897, the son of James H. and Hannah M. Godkin. His parents, ambitious for the success of their only child, gave him the best to be had in the way of educational opportunity, and his school life presents a constantly mounting grade of achievement. Graduating with excellent standing from the Boston Latin School in 1915, he entered Harvard University in the fall of that year. His college course was interrupted by the Great War, and his enlistment in the Aviation Division in December, 1917. In less than a year he was commissioned Second Lieutenant at Post Field, Fort Sill, Oklahoma. In spite of this interruption, however, he received the degree of Bachelor of Arts from Harvard in 1919.

On June 30, 1926, Mr. Godkin married Miss Gertrude Johnston, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. William Johnston of Dorchester, who, with two children—Joan and Kenneth—survives him. A devoted son, he was also a devoted husband and father, bringing to his home life the same intelligence, the same gentleness of spirit, the same unselfish devotion which distinguished his professional career.

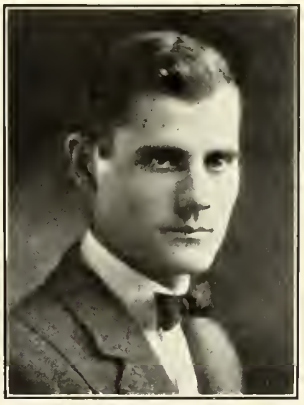
As some men are predestined to become preachers or poets or prophets, so Mr. Godkin was predestined to become a teacher; and immediately after being graduated from Harvard, he accepted a position in the faculty of St. Dunstan's College in Charlottetown, Prince Edward's Island. The following year he went to the High School in Meriden, Connecticut, where he made a conspicuous success. In September, 1923, he came to Brookline.

Always mindful of his professional obligations, Mr. Godkin immediately entered upon a course of graduate study; and in 1924 he received from the Harvard University the degree of Master of Education, with a record far above the average. The next year he took the examinations for a certificate of ability to teach in the Boston schools and passed with a very high rating. Despite these signal achievements, he continued to study right up to the time when ill-health forced him to rest and seek a change of climate.

His unassuming and modest manner could not long conceal his rare qualities, and both pupils and teachers were soon brought to admire his thorough scholarship, his talents, his high ideals, and his warm enthusiam for all worthy activities. In his teaching he was clear, definite, thorough and exacting; yet in spite of his exactions pupils began to seek admission to his class. Very soon invited to become the faculty member of one of the larger fraternities, he welcomed this as an opportunity for extended service; and this was only one of the many activities to which he gave generously of his time and thought and effort.

His propensity for careful, thorough, painstaking work, he continually tried to instill into his classes, and his success was marked, for he not only allured to brighter worlds but led the way. Yet it was not merely careful work that he was able to do; he could write with charm and distinction; he could act with a fine appreciation of character values; and he could inspire such appreciation in others. A discriminating and enthusiastic student, an exacting yet hopeful teacher, and a loyal friend, Mr. Godkin filled a large place in Brookline High School.

"And who shall say that these ardors
Are but cinder in a jar."



Louis E. Nash

Louis E. Nash made his comparatively short pilgrimage in this life with a loving heart and an open and inquiring mind. Those who knew him from his early youth were impressed by his freedom of thought and his gentlemanly qualities. Firm and strong in his convictions, he was yet very gentle and lovable in his social conduct. His intellectual curiosity was of a substantial sort; with an independent spirit he sought the truth of life and the truth of things. His faith in reality, spiritual and material, was intelligent and strong. He had a ready and passionate response to the harmony and beauty of things. Reason and the sense of beauty were his dominant endowments. He achieved the rank of a brilliant mathematician, and his sensitiveness to rhythm and beauty made him an accomplished cellist. These natural gifts made him also a lover of nature; he loved the flowers and the hills and the stars and found his kinship with the Spirit which gave them their beauty. He was a loyal friend, a loyal and good citizen, and a faithful and devoted husband and father. And although he was by nature an idealist, his idealism did not detach him from the practical duties of life. His sense of duty was strong and constant and was supported by an ardent desire to achieve practical results.

But Nature, which richly endowed him mentally and morally, was not so generous to him physically. His body, afflicted at its core from his early youth, could not long endure the strain his high ambition and his labors placed upon it. Finally the "silver cord" broke and he passed from this life at the threshold of his prime.

As a teacher, earnest personal interest in his pupils characterized his work. His influence therefore, extended far beyond the subject taught; he was an example of faithfulness and helpfulness.

Address of Welcome

PARENTS, TEACHERS, AND FRIENDS:

To all of you the Class of 1929 extends a most hearty welcome. The care that you have given to us and the interest that you have shown towards us during our four years in the High School is indeed a suitable reward for our diligent efforts. We have tried to uphold the high principles and lofty standards of Brookline High School. Whatever measure of success that we have attained is due to you, our parents, who have enabled us to go on with our education; to you, our teachers, whose untiring efforts and spirit of helpfulness have inspired us to carry on; and to you, our friends, who have shown your faith and interest in us always, but especially today by coming here.

We regret leaving the familiar halls of the high school and the associations formed here; also we say this honestly—we regret that we must set aside our childlike ways to climb a more difficult trail, the trail of life. However, as in this world, nothing is worth while which is gained by following the path of least resistance, we are now ready to step out into the dangerous road of life. On this road we are desirous of mastering a higher education, of becoming successful in any activity into which we may enter.

Now that the outdoor ceremonies are over, ceremonies made possible by the co-operative spirit of the under classes, you will hear more of our own personal matters. The Class Historian will trace the activities of each individual from the year 1925 to 1929. The Class Prophet and Prophetess will reveal to you the future happiness in store for all of us. The Lawyer will impart to you the record of our last bequests to the under classmen and to certain prominent persons of the school. The Orator will portray our purpose and outlook upon life. The Class Poet will set in verse our ideals for the future.

Once more let me express our gratitude to you, our proud parents; to you, our splendid teachers; and to you, our faithful friends for making it possible for us to share with all mankind the finer things in life.

HENRY HUMPHREYS

Class History

A professor of history enters, stops before a sign and reads what it says: "The Bliss Collection of Famous Histories of Famous Peoples." Surely this isn't the great Bliss collection of which I have heard so much! Well! Let me see what peoples are represented here.

Picks out a book from middle of shelf—Here's a "History of the Development of Mathematics." By whom? Why, none other than E. Case. I didn't know he had written a book. I sure would like to see it. Here's another, "The Life of Napoleon" by er-er-er K. L. O'—'—O'Br—O'Brien (pronounced in French).

Looks at next shelf. Takes out a book and reads the name of it: "Beginnings of America" by Tyler Kepner. Well, she had some noteworthy authors in this collection.

Climbs up ladder, pulls out book, dusts it off; sits on ladder and begins to glance through it. "Roberts—Fink—Hagen-Burger. Well! for th—. I'll be—. Why, it is the history of the famous Class of 1929 of Brookline High School. Here's a book worth reading. I guess I'll have to look it over carefully. Climbs down ladder, sits in chair in front of table and begins to read.

On the fly leaf was found the following dedication:

"For the famous class of twenty-nine,
Thy Alma Mater sure doth pine.
She ne'er forgot thy ambitions bold,
Or deeds performed and never told.
No other class as well prepared,
Has in anyway your equal fared.

To all who watched you while you worked,
None could say that you had shirked.
To you, dear class, these lines I've sung,
Altho in the end I may be hung;
To show you and all the rest around
What a class the world at last has found!

On September 14, 1925, a class of four hundred and seventy-two youngsters entered the Brookline High School, at once astonishing the teachers and mighty upper classmen with their astounding ability and intelligence displayed so early. In fact, the School Committee, realizing their brilliance, granted to the High School that year, the privilege of a 1:30 dismissal for all pupils getting "C" or higher in their subjects. This encouraged the other classes to study harder and try to equal the intelligence of the newcomers. So talented were they musically that the Symphony Orchestra came out to the school to play for them. This class brought in the smallest boy ever to enter, Samuel Jacobs, who was so small that someone was put in charge of him to prevent his being lost.

The notable career of this class was well started by electing for their officers: Francis Hall, president; Elizabeth Jacobs, vice-president; Barrett Roberts to keep the records of their brilliant achievements, and Joseph Lynch to guard the fat treasury.

Barbara Ensign and Francis Hall were representatives in the Teacher-Student Council, giving many useful ideas for the betterment of the school, while Pauline Miller and Francis Hall were members of the Court of Justice. The marshal members were chosen carefully and order was kept so well that the number of marshals was increased by twenty in order to have five more of the '29 class to help them.

The class' first thoughts were turned toward sports. In football some of the leaders were Jack Baine, Captain, Maxwell Dexter, Edward Beck, William Longmore, Barrett Roberts. This squad defeated Newton's freshmen 22-6. In track Johnny Badaracco and Chandler Hagen-Burger began their careers. "Marty" Ford and Johnny Coutts immediately gave promise of their ability in swimming, "Marty" pulling through with a varsity letter. In hockey Walter Murphey, Joe Lynch and Harry Toner triumphed.

The baseball team was led to success by Francis Fleming, and though Newton beat them in the first game, the nine came back in superb fashion and Newton went down in defeat. George Hooper, Samuel Jacobs, and Henry Humphreys were in line for coxswain of the crew.

This inimitable class was well represented in the girl's sports by Jacquelyn and Evelyn Densten, the well-known twins, on the varsity, with Barbara Ensign accompanying. Eleanor Roach led the basketball team to victory. Of the gym team the '29 girls won the corner vault, beating the seniors of that year.

In prize-speaking, Gertrude Lakson was given honorable mention, Isabelle Murphy showed the class talent by making dramatics. The four-minute speakers turned to the famous class of '29 to use their personality in persuading the upper classmen. In order to have representation in every school activity several of the members tried out for the "Sag".

Then with becoming modesty, the class retired in June to get rested for the achievements of their sophomore year.

*See Note 15.

In September, 1926, this prominent group returned to make another successful year. Election of officers was again in order, and Chandler Hagen-Berger took the position of head man, with Jacquelyn Densten close at hand, and ready to assume his place in case he should retire. Edward Hannon, became the keeper of the log, and Alice Colby was the keeper of the purse strings. What might one not expect with such noted officers? Anything might happen. This year Edward Beck and President Chandler Hagen-Berger were on the Teacher-Student Council raising the standard by at least fifty percent. Barrett Roberts, and the President kept up the high reputation of the Court of Justice.

In the major sports '29 came through better than any previous Sophomore class. There were two varsity letter men, Edward Beck and Patrick Cannon, besides Frank Connor and Ben Lamont making letters. John Badaracco, Chandler Hagen-Burger, Irving Rogers, Anthony Cassidy, and Dave Barrie were the representatives with their limber legs in track.

Our natators, "Marty" Ford, Johnny Coutts, Blaine Eynon, and Andrew Conway were recognized leaders in every race. Barrett Roberts, Arnold Silverman, Pat Cannon, Shackford Dexter, Maxwell Dexter, David Agnew, Donald Allen, and Francis Fleming showed their skill in throwing around the horsehide, while Joe Lynch won his "B" in hockey.

The girls also excelled in sports. Evelyn Knight led the class baseball team, Sarah MacLeod was head of Captain ball, Jacquelyn Densten managed the tennis team of which Olive Morse and Evelyn Densten were also members and all three played on the varsity. The Densten twins played varsity hockey with Barbara Ensign, all three winning their letters.

The athletic council, realizing the unparalleled possibilities in his class for track superiority, built for them a board track out-of-doors.

The musical talent of the class was appreciated by making Marjorie Norwood secretary of the band and William Dean its librarian. Dramatics was upheld by Marjorie Norwood in the leading part. Naturally one expected the critics to select the leading lady from '29. Betty Jacobs was in the finals in prize speaking, and the four-minute speakers were an easy field for the display of the talent of this unusual class.

In some of the social events of the year 1929 was conspicuous, notably in the reception to the freshmen who had such shining examples to imitate.

The grade of "C" for 1:30 dismissal was changed to "D" in order that more of the other classmen could be dismissed with the members of 1929.

After such a strenuous year came vacation which was deserved.

During this year death took away two of the members: Joseph James Dwyer in February, 1926, and Helen Janet Noonan in November, 1926. Their passing brought sorrow to their many friends.

* * * * *

In the fall of 1927 the class returned with more vigor than ever to the duties awaiting them, realizing that they were beginning the last half of their high school course. They promptly held class election and elected again the husky Chandler, who "did choose to run," Jacquelyn, the girl with the winning smile, again his first assistant, who hoped for better luck in the chance to become president; Edward Hannon repeated as secretary, and Marjorie became guardian de l'argent.

In sports better ground was gained than ever before. Barrett Roberts already a famous player, John Hurley, and Marty Ford, two great centers, Theodore Ventura, a coming champion as guard, Patrick Cannon, Edward Feinberg and "Luke" Lewis as linesman, all helped to put the football team among those of the highest rank. Irving Rogers, John Badaracco, David Barrie, Dana Smith, Edward Duane, "Bud" Johnston, Harry Fink,

Hugh Redmond, Chandler Hagen-Burger, and Henry Humphreys, manager, were the players who represented the renowned class of 1929 on the cinders. Without them the senior class would have lain down and died. The swimming team stroked their way to a championship with the aide of John Coutts, Andrew Conway, Martin Ford, Blaine Eynon and Paul Bencks. The horsehide was given a tremendous knocking around by "Mickey" O'Neill, Francis Fleming, Edward Lebowich, "Maxey" Dexter, Shackford Dexter, Pat Cannon, and "Tex" Goodwin, while Harry Toner and "Ted" Hannon were holding up the honors in tennis.

This year the girls kept up their excellent reputation in the sports. Many former ones increased their rank, and others followed their lead. Pauline O'Day, Barbara Richardson, and Mildred Bell were the swift ones in swimming; Jacquelyn Densten, Edith Greenleaf and Mary I. McGrail helped the hockey team to victory. The girls of '29 won their letters so fast that the maximum of total points was raised to 500. There was no stopping them, they just would shoot ahead everywhere.

With its usual stride, the class now approaching its height, smashed all Junior records right off by putting thirteen members into the honorary society, a lucky number. As a matter of fact, the points acquired by the Juniors exceeded those of the seniors, especially in scholarship. Then the seniors began to respect them, and it was daily expected that the haughty Seniors would soon have to look up to them.

The "Sag" standard rose to an enviable height when eight of the class joined the staff. The four-minute speakers were eager to draw many of their number from '29. Dramatics chose the following stars: Dorothy Gay, Richard Robinson, Marjorie Norwood, and Robert Cox. The girls' prize in the Murray Kay competition was won by Gertrude Lakson.

Ever alert and watchful for the newest adventure in every field, four of the class, George Mason, Arthur Horn, Robert Stone and Sydney Dobbs started the well-known Brookline Aero Club, the first of its kind in the country.

Twelve members of the band and four of the orchestra were from 1929, while the Teacher-Student Council and the Court of Justice could not function without its aid. Social affairs came in for their proper share of attention and this class put over the snappiest Junior Social ever given, for people talk of that wonderful time to this day. Even the bashful boys and girls danced, admitting afterward that they had a marvelous time.

Summer vacation came just in time to save this class from trampling over the stately seniors.

* * * * *

The fall of 1928 at last arrived and this noble class returned to school as Seniors. Everybody looked up to them, but this worship didn't seem to affect them much, because they had become to used to it, from the beginning of their appearance at B. H. S.

Realizing how much had to be accomplished before the golden day of graduation, the class elected its officers immediately. Chandler Hagen-Burger, who had shown such great ability in leading them during the previous years was placed in the executive position again with Edith Greenleaf for vice-president; Edward Hannon was chosen for the secretary's job, winning being an old custom of his, and Henry Humphreys was made Chancellor of the Exchequer.

Several of the members gained the coveted key bearing the famous insignia, Alpha Pi, "excellence and leadership"; again adding more glory to the illustrious class.

Joseph Donahue occupied the seat of Chief Justice, David Barrie commanded the marshals, Alice Colby was chairman of the Senior Advisors, Chandler Hagen-Burger and Edith Greenleaf were leading members of the Teacher-Student Council, Estelle Freedman guided the Art Club on its tours, and George Mason continued his leadership in the Aero Club. And so on ad infinitum one could go enumerating the prominent places held by 1929's members.

Two new departments were added to the school this year. The school committee realizing what remarkable voices were possessed by this class, began to cultivate them in "Voice". What changes have resulted! So thrifty had these students shown themselves to be, the committee provided a course in Economic Education; Robert Levi became the student leader and directors, treasurers, tellers and other officials were chosen from 1929.

The Aero Club under the same wise leadership, adding seven members in the fall and increasing the senior membership by twenty-seven, made this club the foremost aeronautical unit in the world. The girls not to be outdone by the boys formed their own unit, and they published their own paper "The Aerolette."

The "Sag" could not have survived, but for the talented Class of 1929.

The year, considered socially, was a success. The Senior Social Committee produced a perfect performance with many seniors displaying their talent. Arthur Anderson, famous business manager of dramatics, (an unparallelled honor in High School) was the chairman. It was an event that will long be remembered by everyone. The Senior Dance, the great function of the senior year, was a joyous event. Dave Barrie was the chairman responsible for this important occasion. A new feature was offered, a dance without programs, and it was a success.

Of course, 1929 starred as usual in sports. Football was captained by Barrett Roberts with Richard Robinson as a worthy manager. Theodore Ventura, Harry Fink, Hugh Redmond, Solomon Robinson, "Luke" Lewis, Lawrence Walsh, Charles Jerome, John Hurley, Martin Ford, Edward Feinberg, and Shack Dexter did their parts nobly. Although defeated by Newton, the latter team was never able to cross Brookline's last white line. In track events, Captain John Badaracco, guided his men through the year with glorious success, aided by Housep Boghosian as manager. The Andover Interscholastics were won by B. H. S. boys, including Fink, Blunt, Levenson, Racheotes, "Bud" Johnston, Barrie, Duane, Lo Cascio, Redmond, Lebowich, Hartigan, and Paisner.

Captain Martin Ford led the swimming team in another championship, winning the Lieutenant Meehan trophy for the ninth time. His aids were Ralph Shikes, manager, and the superb swimmers, Steele, Coutts, Conway, Jerome, and Bencks. Captain Morgan O'Neill with Albert Stitt, manager, and "Tex" Goodwin, Max Dexter, Fred Stitt, Shack Dexter, and Mel Anshen kept the baseball team in the limelight. The tennis team, comprising many members of the class, played many love sets.

Edith Greenleaf, captain of field hockey, with "Jackie" Densten and Mary I. McGrail supporting, led their team in defeating Newton five to four. Barbara Wallace, Mildred Bell, and Mary I. McGrail were prominent members of the girls' gym team. The girls' tennis ended the year with many successful matches. Eugénie Goullaud, Jacquelyn Densten, and Frances Delaney were competitors of note.

A crowning event of the last year was the performance of the "Rivals." Joseph Weisberg, Melvin Anshen, Dorothy Gay, John Drum, and Lawrence Cohen, all of the illustrious class of 1929, had major parts in this truly great play, smothering themselves with glory and adding distinction to Brookline High School dramatic performances.

Keeping up this unusual record, the class astounded the School Committee with its high scholastic rating. As a reward for raising the standard of B. H. S., the Board broke all precedents by calling off the midyears.

The Honorary Society gladly opened again its doors to some of the members of '29 in March. It, too, realized that an organization in B. H. S. without representation of the Class of '29 would have no ranking.

After reading all this the learned professor closed the book and with a solemn expression of awe and reverence, returned the volume to its honored place in the world-renowned "Bliss Collection."

* Note 15: The author wishes to state that because of the outstanding ability and unusual ambition of the Class of 1929, to name all the people engaged in every branch of the school activities, would add another volume to this collection.

ROBERT LEVI

Class Oration

CLASSMATES:

High up in the Black Forest of Germany rise a number of tiny streams, so small that the slightest pebbles or twigs determine which shall flow northward and become the Rhine, and which shall flow southward to become the Danube. We, too, are at the point where the smallest obstacles may divert us, and where we must exercise extreme care, lest the course of our lives leads through the barren swamps of wasted effort, instead of the fertile plains of worthwhile existence. Today we stand at the parting of the ways. We are no longer children. We must now choose the road to follow through the rest of our lives. Which way shall we take? What do we propose to make of ourselves? Not what college shall we enter; this is merely incidental, but what kind of life shall we lead? This is the vital question that confronts us now.

We have tremendous advantages to help us in choosing properly. We have a longer and more protracted childhood than children in the orient, who, at a very tender age are sent out to shift for themselves. This ought to fit us for great achievement. It is high time that we learn some measure of self-dependence. Because we can do great things, we must.

We must decide now, while we are young. The story is told of a man who was molding faces in metal. Some were beautiful while others were horribly deformed. Asked to explain the difference, the man replied, "The metal cooled too quickly." We must not allow the metal of our youth, enthusiasm, and promise to cool too soon.

Nor can we afford to delay our decision too long. Remember the recent tragic disaster of the Vestris, when because the Captain deferred sending out an S. O. S., many lives were unnecessarily lost.

We live in a wonderful age. The countless inventions and discoveries provide us with an equipment and training far more valuable than that of any previous period. We have wealth, material resources, educational and cultural opportunities, the like of which were never known before. We are children of the greatest age in all history.

This is youth's day. The world wants young blood to come forth and take over the reins of responsibility. This is our opportunity. Let us choose the right road now, the road of clean lives, good habits, and valuable friendships; of honesty, ambition, and service, so that we make our parents, our town, Brookline High School, proud of the Class of 1929.

MELVIN ANSHEN

Class Poem

I saw, dim-visioned in a fleeting dream,
A long, worn company of marching men
Facing the West, and in each up-turned face
A gleam of what he saw and held the truth.
They were not such as quailed before the storm.
But dared the future's deep unserried rank
Of death on death, of life on life—until—
Great mighty-chested cities did they build,
And with their hands men scraped up stone on stone,
Struggled with bricks that towered o'er their heads,
Fought tooth and nail with wind and rain in all,
Reared temples for the honor of their gods.

I see, clear-visioned in the passing stream,
A long, strong cavalcade of singing youth,
Facing the West, and each with smiling eyes
Sees in the future what the future wills.
We give our Youth, we pledge our Youth to do
All that may lie before us, day by day;
To face the coming sun with up-turned heart;
To make a great stride for humanity.
O God! If in us there may lie some breath,
Some tiny, fragmentary remnant breath,
Or clearer moulding of the dust of Earth—
Preserve us! Bless us! Give us just another day!

JOSIAH LEWIS

Class Prophecy

JACQUELYN DENSTEN

TIME: 1950.

PLACE: B. H. S. Auditorium, at the class reunion of '29.

JACQUELYN (entering from left wing, addressing the class): Oh, I'm sorry to be late! I had trouble getting my iron man to walk. Didn't you ever hear of my new iron man? We've been all over the world together. Really, at times he's quite intelligent though I have difficulty in selling him. He's able to carry on a conversation rather well. Would any of you care to purchase him? (Pauses) No? Wait! I'll give you an exhibition. Maybe that'll change your minds. (Stepping to center, facing left wing) Come here!

ROBOT (offstage): No!

J.—Come here, I said!

R.—All right, coming. (Walks on stage, with drum beating footfalls)

J.—Here, sit down! (to class) Really, he can speak rather well. (to Robot) Wouldn't you like to tell the class of the things you know about them and of the places we've been?

R.—No, I wouldn't.

J.—That's fine. Tell me, what did we see in Paris?

R.—The Folies Bergère.

J.—The Folies Bergère?

R.—Arthur Anderson was producing the show. It's called "The Wedding March" and it has a bevy of beautiful girls who do some really skillful dance numbers. Blaire Whittier, Ruth Pass, Virginia Seavey, Helen Finnerty, Pauline O'Day, Silvia Marcus, and Mabel Kellough are the chorus.

J.—What was that haunting waltz they sang?

R.—"Where Is My Wandering Boy To-Night!" Fred Fancy proved the hit of the show in a sketch entitled: "It Floats!" Ralph DeAvila, Stephen Kovar, Raymond Novogroski, Jesse Klein, Robert Kirk, Bob Kaplan and Dick Robinson supported him.

J.—And what else did we do in Paris?

R.—We saw the Olympic games.

J.—Johnny Badaracco captained the team. You remember.

R.—Sure, but the team lost because it was allured to other places by Isabella Murphy and Evelyn Norris.

J.—Manager Housep Boghosian should have blindfolded the team. Let's see. Where did we go from Paris!

R.—Berlin. That city was too wild for me. I couldn't sleep.

J.—There was an awful racket over our heads. If we hadn't phoned Sergeant Walter Mead, Marion Upton would still be yelling. Who were arrested?

R.—Evelyn Wright, noted bigamist, Dorothy Shapiro, Gertrude Nielson, Helen Horacek, and Marjorie Parker.

J.—And we saw Dorothy Gay, too.

R.—Yes, she was looking around for a seventh husband. She hopes that the seventh will be easier to manage than the sixth meal-ticket, Count Wilfred Bouvier.

J.—Yes, and then we left for Rome. Somebody tried to sell us something, there.

R.—That was Robert Haines. He sells non-skid collar buttons to all suckers who will buy. Tom Riley returned a dozen of them for a pair of pink spats.

J.—And there was an awful traffic jam when we were there.

R.—Uh-huh. Francis Forsythe had to relieve Tom Connelly. There was a smash-up owing to the fact that Forsythe's attention was attracted by a young lady.

J.—Who was she?

R.—Only Joe Weisberg flirting with the lamp-post. He should practise his art in Venice.

J.—We saw plenty in Venice!

R.—I'll say so! Robert Golden and Florence Solomon were there, quarantined with the mumps.

J.—I bet they were having a swell time!

R.—I couldn't tell. The keyhold was stuffed. Raymond Ward was the hotel porter and Neil Nevergelt, the janitor. Lawrence Cohen runs a gondola.

J.—Does he do any business?

R.—Well, Joseph Wright, Ruth MacIver, Grace O'Meara and Evelyn Rudnick patronize him when they wish to catch minnows!

J.—Didn't we have a dreadful time at the Richard Bent Hotel in Egypt?

R.—You mean when it burned down? I hear that Clarice Levine, Mary I. McGrail, Barbara Wallace, Caroline Sherrill, Peggy Swartout and Hazel Nichols were cremated.

J.—Oh, the poor mummies!

R.—Don't worry. Izzy Paisner has consented to pickle the skeletons in his best home brew. I didn't care for our stay in Egypt. London suited me better.

J.—Didn't we see Marjorie Norwood in that fog-bound place? I wonder what she was doing there?

R.—She was out with two Scotchmen, Andrew Conway and Phil McNiff, developing pictures.

J.—And what was that famous trial over which Judge John Drum presided?

R.—That was Brydon Green, first valet, suing Henry Humphreys for back salary. Brydon never liked the job anyway; he says that Henry snores jokes in his sleep.

J.—Yes, and Leonard Solomon, first Lord of the Bedchamber, testified, though he didn't say what kind of jokes Henry told. I remember seeing Betty Gustafson and Helen Hardy in the audience. How did the case come out?

R.—A deadlock. Dan Warren, Ed Andrews, and Dick Cavanaugh couldn't seem to agree. I was glad to start for home.

J.—Forrest Sheinwald was in charge of our ship. Helen Reimer, Ruth Quimby, Lawrence Walsh, Gladys Rubinstein, Charlotte Stuart, Julia Walsh, Milton Wright, and Doris Smallman were also passengers.

R.—Didn't we see Ed Feinberg skating across the Atlantic?

J.—Yes, on Albert Stitt's ball-bearing speed rollers.

R.—I remember. He nearly bumped into Paul Bencks. Paul was stopping off at Edith Greenleaf's home for seagulls.

J.—Edith Greenleaf's home for seagulls?

R.—Sure, she's a great philanthropist to-day. She's constructed an ocean birdhouse for seagulls who have strayed from home. Jeannette Hardy and Dot Kellough are the nurses.

J.—Didn't you get a thrill when George Mason dropped in on us from a Zeppelin? He said that he had recently made a trip to Mars.

R.—They had some curious experiences. Warden Harry Toner refused to admit them, at first, without a passport but everything flowed smoothly when Keith Wedlock and Sid Lemberger lent theirs to the two.

J.—They saw the most pathetic sight, didn't they?

R.—To be sure. Leslie Robart was on top of a church spire, munching a pair of shoes. Arthur Stern was fox-trotting with a kangaroo, and Sol Robinson was counting his fingers. The poor guy couldn't seem to count straight.

J.—Yes, and Arnold Silverman was eating worms. What else did we see? Oh, yes. Ruth Mitnick, Helen Simonds, Mary P. McGrail, Claire Wharton, Florence Buxton, Esther Burgen and Agnes Alm were accompanying John Hurley. John was playing the harp.

R.—Who was that curious fellow we saw when we were entering the place?

J.—Oh, that was John O'Hare polishing the brassworks on the gates. Wasn't Pauline Pierce there also?

R.—I'll say so. She was campaigning for bigger and better scooters, but Alice Colby and Al Feneno preferred a Kiddie Kar built for two.

J.—Uh, huh, and Dave Barrie was there romping with the Teddy Bears and the butterflies. (Oh, he's so playful!) It was interesting, but I was happy to be back in Boston when we docked. We saw plenty of people in Boston. Remember that mob at Jordan Marsh's?

R.—That was Harry Fink. He's official mattress tester for the Edward Beck Cradle Co. Anna Reynolds thought that Harry had most shapely legs.

J.—Oh, yes, and Dot Ehrlich fainted. I hear that Doris Willett and Evelyn Charbonneau have complained to the Company. They say that the cradles swarm with bugs.

R.—Maybe, but Grace Sovrenski, Phyllis Barkin and Ruth Greenberg are satisfied users.

J.—We saw Chandler Hagen-Burger, too, didn't we?

R.—My, yes. Chandler's a Federal Agent. He recently analyzed a case of orangeade from Morgan O'Neill's rum-runner.

J.—What did he say?

R.—He said that if a monkey wrench will dissolve in bottles of the stuff one drinks, one should patronize the same bootlegger. Robert Stone, Fred Stitt, Walton Goodwin and Herbert Halpern are on O'Neill's crew.

J.—There's been a terrible lot of rum-running going on lately!

R.—Yes, but Coast Guard Chuck Jerome is on the track of these hi-jackers, while the firm of Mickelson, McMullen and Macleod are hot on the trail of that well-known interior decorator, Vic Newman.

J.—We saw Vic the other evening down at the Public Gardens, I think.

R.—Yes, he was making a daring dash across the pond in his high-powered swan boat, the "Whoopee!"

J.—What's happened to Ed Hannon and Walter Murphy, those famous songsters?

R.—They've finally entered the Franklin Park Zoo. You recollect, we saw them while we were walking through the place.

J.—That's right. Didn't Morton Goldstein look funny, swinging back and forth in his cell?

R.—Yes, and in the next cell, Elisabeth Lee was reading bed-time stories to Sidney Dobbs, Mary Ryan, and Bernice Rose.

J.—Uh-huh. And when we went to Norumbega Park, we saw Evelyn Densten fall in the river in her skunk-skin fur.

R.—I'll bet it was an attractive coat.

J.—It was attractive, all right. You'd know it a mile away. Two big game hunters pulled her out.

R.—I expect they were John Arnold and Charlie Funk. They thought she was some foreign animal and peppered her by mistake.

J.—Anyway, John Brookhouse volunteered to extract the shot.

R.—So I heard. But I didn't like the way Mabel Greene, John Neary, Margaret McKenzie, Joseph Fitzpatrick, Ruth Olans, Tom Johnson and Gertrude Kently serenaded us with carols on Christmas Eve. If Night Guardsman Stanley Levenson hadn't driven them away from the vicinity, I should have fallen to pieces . . . I was sorry to leave for New York.

J.—So was I. Eddie Duane was down there. He told me that he had just come up on a visit from Florida.

R.—I bet he was selling real estate.

J.—Wrong! He's devoting his life to the selling of underwear to giraffes and other long-neckers. Barbara Richardson and Mildred Bell assist him in designing patterns while Dorothy Coughlin, Eunice Barron, Katherine Andler, Elizabeth Mohr and Gertrude Katz are the fitting dummies.

R.—Charlie Record was in the big city with Ed, wasn't he? I believe he was exhibiting his green and yellow Ford. He attempted to pick up Harriette Tichnor and Margaret Towel, on Broadway, but they wouldn't ride in a Ford.

J.—And Shack Dexter was there too. I hear the girls aren't giving Shack the rush any more.

R.—How's that?

J.—He has chapped lips. The strain of kiss-proof lipstick tester was too much for him when he experimented on Miriam Perry and Josephine Geoghegan. Besides that, he got a high voltage blood pressure when he tried the stuff on Irene Ginzberg and Myra Bresky.—Remember that writers' convention we attended?

R.—Yes. There was a lot of talk about Jack Cohen's book: "Savage Women I Have Known."

J.—They say that he drew his heroine from a study of Sophie Wilson. Who published the book?

R.—Frank Cohen; but it was censored by Gerald Price. Judith Thurman is head of the board of censors. I preferred that poem that was read; it was written by Melvin Anshen and dedicated to Gertrude Lakson, editress of the New York Sun.

J.—How does it go?

R.—

Grass may be lavender,
The side walk blue;
The sea may be pink,
But I like you.

It was reprinted in the Sun—in the agony column, I think.

J.—Hester Blatt writes the Lovelorn Column, doesn't she? And isn't Alexander Levitt sports editor?

R.—Yes, and that isn't all. Teddy Ventura is Society Editor. And Albert L'Esperance and Barbara Bugbee run the funeral notices. But there are too many people in that city.

J.—Philadelphia's nearly as bad. James Flagg is there, giving a series of lectures on "How to cook without mother's help." Agnes Keane, Daisy Copeland, Annabelle Ferguson, Katherine Conroy and Marian Hillson are in his class.

R.—And Washington may not be so crowded but the fights in the Senate get on one's nerves. Did you see the way Congressman Joe Donahue hit Senator Melhado in the neck over a discussion about Sam Jacobs' height?

J.—It was a good thing that Anthony Ryan stopped the brawl. I noticed Eleanor Goodspeed, Beatrice Finn, Sarah MacLeod, Thirza Durant and Doris King up in the balcony. And Paul Johnston, Alva Allen and Al Dane were downstairs, fighting with Ruth Tannen and Mary Murray, the only two women Senators present.

R.—Chicago wasn't much better. Bill Dean broadcasted a boxing match between Ed "Dynamite" Sondheim and Warren "Bruiser" Lothrop. John Steele refereed the battle.

J.—Lawrence Mason, Bill Longmore, Harold Kirk, and Joe Graham fought in the preliminaries. Barbara Strong bet on Longmore and lost.

R.—She had to walk home in a barrel, didn't she?

J.—I think so. Do you remember that model of Janet Wolfson's six-cylinder raft that we saw in one of the show places?

R.—Yes. I read in the newspaper that Esther Dizek and Edith Druker are bumming their way down the Mississippi on it. They encountered Katherine Allen and Mary Fay on their way down.

J.—And they were nearly wrecked when they ran into a snag.

R.—That was no snag. That was Janice Levy in bathing.

J.—I see. We got a glimpse of Margaret Stein, on our way across the continent. What was she doing?

R.—She was breaking in wild broncos on Howard Berger's horse farm. Nick Larkin, Alvin Spencer, and Bill Stitt are cowpunchers. Barbara Loggie has the job of cooking for them.

J.—Oh poor Barbara. The climate in Los Angeles isn't what it's cracked up to be.

R.—You said it. But it inspires people. Harriette Mode was there, posing for that rising young painter, James Eadie.

J.—Jim Eadie? I never knew he could twirl a brush? What does he paint?

R.—Fences! Elliott Hurwitz resides there.

J.—He's a great surgeon now, isn't he?

R.—Yes, he's just discovered a solution that will dissolve all species of corns and bunions.

J.—Has anyone used his solution?

R.—Geraldine Stearns. Geraldine says of his discovery: "I use the Hurwitz Bunion Beater. It gives me instant relief." Estelle Friedman and Marjorie O'Neil also declare that it is soothing to the skin.

J.—Eugénie Goullaud was in Hollywood.

R.—She went there to analyze the climate business, didn't she?

J.—Yes, with Elizabeth Brigham. She met Maud Hastings, champion fly-swatter, doubling for Frances Delaney in the latter's film release, "Let Nature Take Its Course." Helene Bennett, Muriel Dodson, Lucy Cardinale, Amy Burnes, Edythe Greene and Barbara Hoffman are playing extra bits.

R.—I was sorry to leave California. Hawaii wasn't a bad place, though. Ed Lebowich was there, hunting tigers.

J.—But there aren't any tigers in Hawaii.

R.—I know; that's why Eddie hunts them. Barrett Roberts lives there also, doesn't he?

J.—No, you're thinking of Francis Hall. Francis is in Java preaching the gospel to a group of heathen, but Eleanor Roach and Irma Pendleton can't seem to learn anything.

R.—Then where's Barrett?

J.—He's in Africa, Barrett's renounced the yoke of civilization for the call of the wild. He's returned to the jungle with Dot Lewenberg, Elsie Wyzanski, Adele Stengle and Eunice Slawsby, to establish a back-to-nature colony.

R.—But I thought that that was Jimmie Webster.

J.—No, Jimmie Webster's in Spain, throwing the bull. You're all mixed up.

R.—So I see. But I'm right when I say that we came across some hula dancers in the Fiji Islands!

J.—That's correct. Those were Frances Rideout and Dorothy Riordan. They were entertaining the crowds who were watching Joseph Prior and Donald Allen struggle for the chess championship of the Pacific. How'd you like Australia?

R.—All right. Wasn't Carol Payne there?

J.—Oh, yes. She's a fugitive from the States—wanted for murder.

R.—Whom did she kill?

J.—Albert Hatch, her husband. She said that Albert insisted on practising his golf swing in the parlor. William Corbett, Walter Geary and Tom Duddy of the New York Police Department are hunting her in conjunction with Christina Mitchell and Dot Hughes, female detectives.

R.—And I believe that Mel Anshen wrote another poem describing her. Let's see; it goes:

Miss Payne is white,
Of medium height,
With languishing eye,
And a big appetite.

They ought to find her on that.

J.—But I was most surprised when I learned that Betty Jacobs was in Hong-Kong with a dentist's degree.

R.—Yes. I heard that she pulled the teeth of Ralph Shikes. Red is now suffering from lockjaw.

J.—Mildred Kilcup, Mary Johnson, and Helen O'Brien also were her victims. What did you think of Japan?

R.—It was too crowded and noisy, too much like an American city.

J.—I saw an American magazine in one of those rickety stands in Tokio. There was a cigaret advertisement on the back page with a picture of Natalie King who stated that she kept slim by reaching for a Lucky instead of a sweet. Frances Parsons and Elizabeth Walsh were looking at her picture.

R.—Pekin was much the same as Tokio. I saw Bob Levi in Pekin.

J.—What was he doing?

R.—He was down at the fish market stringing beans. I wasn't so keen on India. The climate actually melted me to a molten state.

J.—But it was worth the trip just to see Winnie Hurst go deep-sea diving. She keeps Marshall Levin's five-and-ten well supplied with pearls. Too bad we had to turn back for home. I always wanted to see Turkey.

R.—Frank Connors is in Turkey.

J.—Lifer Connors? Doing what?

R.—Baiting mouse traps down at the Sultan's harem. I'm getting tired of talking. You'd better re-wind me or let me go.

J. (rising)—I guess you'd better go. You're looking as if you need a rest. Stand up! (Robot stands stiffly, jerks his feet upward, and marches offstage into left wing, with drum beating footfalls).

JACQUELYN (facing class): Come now, you've seen the exhibition. Will anyone purchase my iron man?

VOICE FROM THE CLASS: I'll take a dozen. Wrap them up!

JACQUELYN: Thank you! (Walks off stage)

ELLIOTT HURWITZ

Last Will and Testament

Be it remembered: that we, the Class of 1929, of the Brookline High School in Brookline and the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, being of sound mind and memory, but knowing the uncertainty of this life, do make this out last will and testament, hereby revoking all wills, heretofore made by us.

After the payment of our just debts and funeral charges, we bequeath and devise as follows:

First: To Mr. Akers, Mr. Jewett, Miss Sawyer, and the entire faculty we leave our undying gratitude for the unselfish interest they have always shown us.

Second: To the underclassmen we leave the questionable pleasure of many more years in school.

Third: Chandler Hagen-Burger leaves his excellent leadership to Francis Muldowney.

Fourth: Marty Ford leaves his way with the women and his ability in the tank to John Highland.

Fifth: Joe Donahue, Joe Lewis, and Charley Record, after years of handling money in the lunchroom, leave a fund for the establishment of the Brookline Cooking School.

Sixth: Barrett Roberts leaves his football leadership to Rah-Rah Hootstein.

Seventh: George W. Mason, Jr., responsible for that popular organization, the Boys' Aero Club, leaves to it, two second-hand Curtis sewing machines.

Eighth: Harry Toner leaves Miss Bliss of Rhode Island over-joyed at his departure from her History class.

Ninth: Johnny Badaracco leaves a very successful track record to Dana Smith.

Tenth: Eddie Duane leaves his supremacy among the B. H. S. motorists to the moustachioed marathoner, Al LoCascio.

Eleventh: To Betty Richey, Gertrude Lakson leaves a host of A's and the Presidency of Alpha Pi.

Twelfth: Harry Fink leaves his general all-around athletic ability to some dark horse among the Juniors.

Thirteenth: We all willingly bequeath to Mr. Paul Tyler Kepner

a brand new book of Scotch jokes—Uncensored.

Fourteenth: Pauline Pierce leaves her good looks to Elaine Skidmore.

Fifteenth: Melvin Anshen leaves a permanent place on the first honor role to Dean Johnson.

Sixteenth: Miss J. Densten and Shack Dexter leave to the B. H. S. Library one hundred copies of their mutual autobiography: "The Home Beautiful."

Seventeenth: The Senior members of the Dramatics cast leave their talent to Al Weinberg—he needs it.

Eighteenth: The late members of the Sag leave a brand new Sag room to Norma Berlow and Roger Burkhardt.

Nineteenth: Mr. Martin Edward Hannon of Brookline and Broadway leaves Miss O'Brien the solemn promise that never again will she have such a pupil.

Twentieth: Edith Greenleaf leaves her popularity to Eleanor Thomas.

Twenty-first: To those unfortunate Juniors who have Senior History ahead of them we leave a truly enjoyable series of Tuesday afternoon lectures in Shailer Hall.

Twenty-second: Mickey O'Neill leaves his baseball ability to Red Fleming.

Twenty-third: Arthur Stern leaves his modest confession that there never will be another Year Book like this one.

Twenty-fourth: Dave Barrie and Joe Donahue leave vacant two prominent positions for ambitious Juniors to occupy.

Twenty-fifth: We all gladly and permanently leave behind us our seats in Detention.

Twenty-sixth: Our noble President and co-worker leaves one special bottle of chloroform to the associated K. K. K.—Messrs. Keegen, Kepner, and Kase.

Twenty-seventh: Fred Fancy leaves his big bass drum to the school to use again next year.

Twenty-eighth: We leave our mascot, little Edwin Herbert Taylor, one year older than we found him.

Twenty-ninth: We leave for future reference the buildings, grounds, desks, and teachers of the Brookline High School.

We hereby nominate and appoint as executrix, Miss Lewis, and request that she be exempt from giving any surety on her bond, as such.

Signed,

THE CLASS OF 1929.

In testimony whereof, we, the Class of 1929, have signed, published, and declared this to be our last will and testament in the presence of the undersigned, who at our request, in our presence, and in the presence of each other have hereto subscribed their names as witnesses to said will.

ELLIOTT HURWITZ,
Class Attorney.

The progress of the Class of 1930 has been exceptional in the three years that it has participated in High School activities. Members of the class are prominent in as well as outside the school curriculum.

One of its bright members, elected to the Honorary Society, the highest honor in the school, was credited with more than nineteen points, a remarkable feat for a Senior, not to mention a Junior.

Another was elected president of the Associated Body of Student Councils for Massachusetts for the coming year.

The Sophomore has now passed the second milestone on the way to Graduation and so far has been extremely successful.

The Class was well represented in the Senior Social and three major parts in the "Rivals", this year's Dramatic Club Production, were given to Sophomores.

In Athletics, the Class has certainly made a name for itself as the football Captain-elect is a member of the Class of 1931. This is a very rare occurrence. We were also represented on the championship swimming team by two letter-men and on the track and baseball teams. On the girls' teams we were also well represented and almost every varsity team had a Sophomore girl on it.

The Class of 1932 has begun its career at Brookline High School with a fine start. According to the General Intelligence Test given at the beginning of the term, '32 ranks as one of the best Freshman Classes that ever entered the school.

In athletics as well as scholarship, 1932 has distinguished itself, several of the members earning positions on the teams. The athletic outlook for the future year is very promising.

A large number of the members have joined in the extra-curriculum activities. One of the prizes given at the Prize Speaking Contest was won by a girl of '32. With such a fine beginning, it is sincerely hoped that 1932 will continue its good work and hold up the standards of Brookline High School.

The outstanding accomplishment of the year was the inauguration of Honor Study Periods. The study rooms are not in charge of a teacher or a student. A pupil keeps the attendance, but has no further authority. This new method of study-room management has been a great success, and has met with the hearty approval of the student body.

On February 22, 1929, Brookline had the honor of entertaining the Annual Convention of Teacher-Student Councils of Massachusetts High Schools, and at that meeting Alvin Weinberg '20, was elected President and Francis Muldowney '30, a Director of the State Association for the coming year.

The Court of Justice is the judicial division of student government in our school. It is before this body that any infringements of school regulations are brought for discussion and discipline.

Its chief purpose is to help the student in trouble, not to punish him; to develop in him a real spirit of co-operation as well as foster a respect for authority. He is tried before fellow-students as well as teachers, all of whom are anxious to secure a fair viewpoint of the case in hand and judge him fairly. Any decision is subject to criticism by the Headmaster.

The Headmaster, the Captain of the Marshals, and the Teacher-Student Council may bring cases to the Court for consideration. After five years, it is no longer an experiment, but rather a fixture in the life of the school.

The year 1929 was marked by a very congenial understanding between the school and its popularly elected group of marshals, who take this opportunity to thank the student body for its whole-hearted co-operation.

In the future more of the justly deserved credit should be given to the Secretary of Marshals whose accomplishment of exacting and difficult clerical tasks is seldom publicly noted.

The purpose of the League is to bind the girls of the school into a closer unity, and to create a spirit of loyalty to each other and the school. Judging from the increase in membership, additional activities, and the fine spirit shown in executing these activities much progress has been made in accomplishing the purpose.

The League has enjoyed a lecture on Astronomy by Mr. Packard, a party for the Junior and Freshmen classes, an entertainment for the new girls and their mothers, a Hallowe'en Party, a birthday party for the Freshmen, and a Christmas Party, when gifts were prepared for the Brookline Friendly.

League members have served as Senior Advisors, Dean's Office Assistants, Library Assistants, Switchboard Operators, Candy Girls and Ushers. It sponsors competition between the classes, based on scholarship, athletic achievement and attendance, also in spelling.

The League adopted an official button pin, now being worn by over 650 girls, besides an attractive pin which may be purchased.

In February each year the officers are elected, in order to be prepared for the work of the next year; the most efficient girls are selected as Advisors to welcome the incoming Freshmen and help them become acquainted with their new surroundings.

The Society this year equalled that of last year in size having forty-three members. The last few elections have found so many of the students eligible to membership that a proposition to make the requirements more difficult is under discussion.

Freshman Class members would do well to plan ways of getting a sufficient number of points in their first year, for low marks then may mean a great disappointment in the Junior and Senior year. To strive for, and attain to, the position of a member in Alpha Pi is surely one of the greatest honors that a student can win in high school, for in the endeavor he benefits both the school and himself.

Under the 1928-1929 regime the Sagamore has prospered. Unhampered by financial cares, the Board has been free to devote its energy to the improvement of the literary department.

The Sagamore assembly early in the fall struck a responsive chord in the school. Although it was impossible to find Staff positions for all the aspirants, the enthusiasm was very encouraging.

Due to the abundance of copy and advertisements several issues contained ten and even twelve pages, a novel and pleasing situation for the editors.

Unprinted and known are the efforts of our faculty advisors, Mr. Harbour and Mr. Jewett. The Sagamore Board takes this opportunity to thank them and all who have been interested in our effort faithfully to represent Brookline High in its publication.

This group, numbering over fifty, is ready at any time to bring matters needing publicity to the attention of the school. This year they have spoken about tardiness and about the picture sponsored by the Teacher-Student Council

One of the valuable services which they rendered was their co-operation in starting the High School Bank. The information which they delivered and the enthusiasm that they aroused resulted in a most creditable opening.

They supply real service to the student body while training themselves to think clearly and speak to the point.

The Library Staff is organized every fall of members of the Girls' League who wish to work in the Library, and who are approved by Miss Sawyer. This year there are thirty members on the staff. Some of their duties are: to distribute the library slips, to stamp books, and to mend books and magazines. Under the supervision of Mr. Downing, four Freshmen, whose home rooms are in the Manual Training Building, take charge of the books there.

The social life of the Staff is also very pleasant. Last November the members gave a very delightful tea for the Faculty. A theatre party and a visit to the Wellesley College Library were other functions of enjoyment. Each year the Library Staff tries to visit other libraries and museums.

The plan formulated last year by which all social entertainments should be conducted by Senior, Junior, and Sophomore committees has been followed this year.

There is more to a Senior Social than sociable Seniors. Tossing "talent" skillfully about, the Class of '29 held its supreme all-school party December twenty-first. It was the only function of the year that brought out the varied talents of the school. "Talent" played to capacity. Two hours of entertainment followed by two hours of dancing made the evening, dramatically, socially, and financially profitable.

Senior Committee: Arthur D. Anderson, Jr., Chairman; Dorothy Gay, Edward Hannon, Isadore Paisner, Barbara Richardson.

Faculty Committee: Miss Hannon, Chairman: Miss O'Brien, Mr. Phelps.

The Junior Social Committee adopted a new plan with the purpose of breaking the monotony of an afternoon of dancing. It limited attendance to members of the two upper classes. Another change was the attempt to make the social less formal. March first the new plan was tried out with very satisfying results.

Junior Committee: Francis W. Muldowney, Jr., Chairman: Rose Badaracco, Daniel Crews, Marjorie Delle, Herbert Finn, Charles French, Edna Friedman, Esther Graham, Rockwell Gray, John Hahn, Albert Lo Cascio, Esther Muldowney, Marian Myers, Eleanor Thomas, Preston Woodlock.

Faculty Committee: Miss Parker, Chairman; Mrs. Nasmyth, Miss O'Brien, Miss Poland, Mr. Case, Mr. Harbour.

The Class of '31 welcomed the Class of '32 into the High School social life on November eleventh by a most enjoyable afternoon social. Two plays followed by dancing and refreshments were included in their program.

Sophomore Committee: Chester Litman, Chairman; Rosalind Badaracco, Donald Broadbent, John Chase, Helene Dawson, Florence Freedman, Phyllis Green, Betty Greenleaf, Helen Johnston, Lamson Kerins, Charles Myer, Barbara Richey, Winslow Robart, Fred Sherry, Alice Werner, Charles Wood.

The outlook for the orchestra at the first of the year was not a promising one. However, by the third rehearsal enough players had joined so that a fairly good combination was on hand for its first public performance. Since then the orchestra has steadily grown so that it now has as good, if not better combination than ever. It has had the pleasure of playing at several outside engagements as well as at the usual school functions. During the year a number in the string section played with another orchestra in Symphony Hall.

It has performed at the annual Dramatics, the Senior Social, Lincoln Day Celebration, Christmas Festival, and Graduation. In a large degree the success of the orchestra has been due to the efforts of Mr. Cook, our director, not only in getting new members, but in helping them to play.

A quartet, consisting of Thomas Reynolds, tenor, Alva Allen, bass, Harold Segall, base and Robert MacLeod, bass, sang behind the scenes during the Cathedral scene.

The Club appeared also at the performance of Dramatics in March with selections from "Pirates in Penzance" and in April at the Roosevelt Day Celebration.

In the past the Girls' Glee Club of the Brookline High School was an organization consisting of a limited number. This year the "precedence of descent" has not been followed, with the result that a club, whose roster was one hundred and eighty-four members met in September to start rehearsals. Of this group there was a smaller one, having exceptionally good voices, upon whom our leader, Mr. Cook, was able to depend for special occasions when a few singers were appropriate.

The entire Club participated in the annual Christmas festival at both the afternoon and evening performances. The play being Sheridan's, "The Rivals", the musical program arranged by Mr. Cook was in accordance and comprised several old Engish tunes. At the Freshman party given for the Girls' League in April, the Freshman members of the Glee Club formed a very interesting chorus, and sang creditably. In April, the entire Club took part in the annual "Heroes' Day" celebration collaborating during the performance with the Boys' club in a double chorus.

We have enjoyed the Monday meetings very much and have started a large Club. Our sincere wishes are extended to the furthering of this institution by saying, "Keep up the good work."

One hundred and thirty-two boys shared in Brookline air supremacy as members of the Brookline Aero Club. Its second year of organization was marked with a continuous series of successes. One in every eight boys in school are wearing Aero Club emblems. Upon returning to school in September, plans for a booth at the Aero show held in Mechanics Building were completed and carried out. The recognition of the Club by the National Aeronautical Association, and a word of commendation from Amelia Earhart is proof enough of the Club's good work.

Early in October, a brilliant model meet was held in the Commonwealth Armory under the auspices of the Aero Club. Fifty-one of the members flew over Boston as a unit in the middle of October, incidentally the most people ever to take the air in successive flight under one name, at the Boston Airport, to that date.

Regular meetings were held during the winter, with speakers telling some experiences that are unparalleled. In February, the Aero Club paid homage to Captain Harry Lyon, navigator of the famous "Southern Cross", who told of his flight. In March plans were completed for the installation of an air identification marker. The Club presented a motion picture, "40,000 Miles with Lindbergh" at an assembly which the entire school attended in April.

The officers of the Club were made trustees of the valuable H. M. Murdock Collection of Aviation Pictures.

In response to an invitation from the Boy Scouts of New England, the Aero Club had a booth at their exposition held in the Boston Garden. It also played a prominent part in Class Day exercises.

The entire Aero Club is deeply indebted to Mr. Downing for his ingenuity in helping to make the Club the foremost aeronautical unit in Brookline.

September, 1928, found many girls interested in Aeronautics. An Aero Club was organized and forty-five girls registered. Since that time twelve new members have been added. Officers were elected; pins and Clubs pins were secured, and the club paper "The Aerolette" issued.

The girls have found model building most interesting, and a number of good propellors and wings have been made.

The Faculty advisors have helped the club very greatly and generous thanks are extended to them for their interest.

The Art Club has had an unusually profitable year. More members took advantage of the splendid opportunities so ably conducted to enjoy the exhibits in and around Boston.

The new wing of the Museum was visited shortly after it opened. Art week in Boston proved especially interesting to those members who saw the exhibitions in Jordan's and Filene's; trips to the various art galleries, the glass flowers at the Agassiz Museum, and the fishes at the Aquarium were also enjoyed.

The social side of the club was not neglected. A "get-together" party was held in the fall. A tea was given to the mothers and the Club was honored by the presence of Dr. Barker when he was an Assembly speaker.

There are about twenty-five members of the Club. Only pupils who have an average of C or over are eligible for membership.

Among the eight meetings that the Club has had was one with a lecture and demonstration given in February about quick breads and baking powder biscuits. The following Thursday a prize contest on this subject was held. The winners were Betty Gustafson, first; Esther Byer, second; Helen Saunders, third; with Barbara Hougham receiving honorable mention.

In April the Club had the pleasure of entertaining the Home Economics Club of Newton High School. About twenty-five girls with two teachers represented their Club with an equal number from our Club to receive them. Elly Kassman, Elizabeth Walsh, Esther Graham, and Eleanor O'Hare entertained for the Club. After which refreshments were served.

The past year has been a most successful one with Troop 11. There has been an increase in membership probably due to the fact that many new and interesting activities have been undertaken. In September there was a supper hike. In October there was a week-end trip to Plymouth, with Miss Poland to whom much credit is due for the good time. Thanks should go to Mrs. Driscoll who lent her cottage. At Christmas time the Troop went to the Girls' League Party and helped make dolls for the Children's Hospital. Also, Christmas cards were sold to raise money for the Girl Scout Scholarship. Garments are being made by the members for the Woman's Needlework Guild; these are to be distributed by the Guild to needy families or to children in hospitals. The Troop had an active part in a demonstration on Roosevelt Day.

At the Girl Scout Rally held May 11, the Troop won the Town Banner for competition in Scout Achievement, Community Service and Attendance; 68½ hours apiece were averaged in Community Service, an unusual record. Natalie King '29 won the Golden Eaglet, the highest award possible; letters of commendation were given Sarah MacLeod '29, Jane Dumont, Ruth Cushman, Carol Orr, and Eleanor Ronimus, from 1930.

As another successful year of "Le Cercle Francais" is brought to a close, it is gratifying to note that despite the high standard of eligibility, the club has claimed a goodly number of members. These students have greatly profited by their opportunities to become better acquainted with the language and customs of France.

The first meeting this year was devoted to a group of short plays. Miss Henry sang and the Freshman members interpreted a few songs by motions.

The feature of the second meeting was a lecture by Madame Allen on the history of the Christmas songs. At the March meeting, pupils of the Grammar schools entertained with interesting plays.

The year's program was ended with plays and stunts at the last meeting.

The German Club has had a very successful year. The annual Christmas meeting was, as usual, enjoyed by all. At an extra meeting, April first, a play, "Einer Muss Heiraten", was presented by four members of the Junior Class, Dorothy Alter, Allen Bennett, Silwyn Kudisch, and Leona Moss, who were coached under the able guidance of the faculty advisor.

It remained for the School Committee of Brookline to see the practical need of economic education in the elementary and secondary schools and to be the first in the world to authorize such a course throughout the local system in September, 1928.

In the High School budgeting and banking have been introduced, first as the most direct and effective way to start students on the road to an intelligent use of their income whether large or small.

"Good fortune" in its truest, broadest, and highest sense is made possible for those who choose to take advantage of these opportunities. Many have already done so, and the Commercial department is not only acquitting itself with great credit, but is receiving a training of large practical value toward the success of its members in the future.

At the beginning of the season, the outlook for a successful year in football was not very encouraging, but with the aid of a few veterans and several newcomers to the school, Coach Hines was able to field a team which gave a good account of itself.

Despite the fact that Brookline lost to Newton by a score of 3-0, the team nevertheless turned in several brilliant victories, the most notable of which was Somerville's defeat by 13-6. Several victories had to be forfeited owing to the fact that an ineligible player participated in the games.

The following boys won places on the All-Suburban Team: Harry Fink, Louis Wolek, John Hurley and Theodore Ventura. Harry Fink was also placed on several others.

The team owes its successes to Coaches Hines and Fitzgerald, who certainly did their share in giving aid and instruction to all the boys throughout the season.

With few seasoned players from the preceding year, the team has greatly improved in a short time Starting the season with only two letter men, Mr Fitzgerald has moulded together a team which will give its opponents a good battle.

Most of the team this year is made up of Juniors and Sophomores.

Over eighty reported for the team this year and it was divided into the varsity, under Mr. Fitzgerald, the second team under Mr. Ball, and the Freshman team was placed in the capable hands of Mr. Connor.

SPRING SCHEDULE

Boston College Interscholastics.
Brookline vs. Newton.
Harvard Interscholastics.

The track squad reported this season with five veterans. It was but a skeleton of last year's State Championship Team which was made up of such stars as Eugene Record, Richard Werner, Alfred Prince and John Jewett who were all lost through graduation. This year's squad set out with a determination to become winners, and their faithful and diligent work made them so.

Newton defeated Brookline only after a very hard fought battle as the final score of 81½ to 72½ indicates.

Brookline centered its strength in the relay at the B. A. A. Meet and was gratified by defeating Newton by twenty yards in 3:13 4/5, the fastest time of the day. This time compares favorably with the meet record of 3:11 which has stood for a great many years. The team won the Andover Interscholastics for the first time in the history of Brookline High and was awarded a beautiful shield which was presented to the school.

Dana Smith and Harry Fink were the outstanding stars of the season. Dana ran the 600 under 1:20 several times, doing 1:18 2/5 at the Andover meet which shattered the old records. He scored many points in the high and broad jumps and was also a valuable relay man. Harry Fink went through the season undefeated in the shot-put. Al LoCascio, our star broad jumper, was a first place winner in the State meet. Other point winners were: Peter Racheotes in the high and broad jumps, dashes and a member of the relay team; Eddie Duane in the hurdles and relay; Eddie Lebowich in the hurdles; Johnny Badaracco in the dash, 300, and relay; Dave Barrie, Winchester Dermody, Francis Hall in the high jump; Richard Hartigan in the 600; Donald Blunt in the 1,000; Ben Hootstein in the shot-put, Morgan O'Neill in the 300.

Brookline	45	Tech Freshman 17
Brookline	24	Meehan Interscholastics

Although slightly handicapped by a lack of veterans, the swimming team went through the season losing only to Andover, and then by a small margin. The Lieutenant George R. Meehan Trophy was won for the ninth time and with it the schoolboy championship of New England.

The season opened with an interclass meet which was won by the Seniors. With the material discovered in this meet and with last year's veterans, Coach J. McNamara developed a team so well-balanced that, in the Meehan Interscholastics, points were gained in every event but one. A new rival has been added to the schedule in the St. George's School of Newport, Rhode Island, which replaced the Dartmouth Freshman. The total point score, 403, to the opponents' 179 shows that Brookline more than doubled their rivals' units.

The team was handicapped this year by not having a letter man of last year's squad available. An entirely new team was developed from those who survived the second round of tournament play.

The schedule of matches included games in the suburban league week with Newton, Malden, Everett, Cambridge, Quincy, Somerville, and Lynn teams. Other teams played were from Arlington, Public Latin and Mechanic Arts High Schools.

The Girls' Swimming Team has passed another victorious season. Most of the credit for its success is due to Coach McNamara, who has patiently labored with the team.

This year's team consisted for the most part of veteran swimmers although some of the promising new material took part in the meets.

The only two meets held this year were both with Pawtucket High School, an old rival of Brookline. The first meet was held at Brookline. The resulting score of the swimming was 41 to 21 in Brookline's favor. The return meet took place at the Pawtucket Pool with a team consisting of several new swimmers. The victory was again taken by Brookline although some of the races were very close. In both meets Brookline won the relay, and took almost every first place.

The Field Hockey Team has had a most successful year under the able coaching of Miss James. In the class competition the Juniors were victorious, and the Sophomores were close seconds. The teams were captained by Mary I. McGrail '29, Ruth Myers '30, Rosalind Badaracco '31, and Gladys Norris '32. At the final meeeting of the team, Betty Richey '30 was elected captain for the next season, and Rosalind Badaracco '31, the manager.

A large number of girls won their class letter: Betty Richey for the third year; Mary McGrail who also received the high honor of being chosen for the All Boston Junior Hockey Team; Rosalind Badaracco was awarded honorable mention.

There was one varsity meet with Cambridge-Haskell School and was carried out in the form of a playday. The various teams red, blue, yellow, and green, were formed of girls from each school. The blue team won by gaining the highest number of points.

There were three interclass meets carried out in the same manner, that of a playday. The teams were formed of members of each class divided equally as nearly as possible.

The teams were coached by Miss James, who was also hockey coach, Miss Kelly, and Miss Haskell.

June 4, Brookline at Winchester.
June 11, Newton at Brookline.

The nucleus of the team was formed from the members of last year's team who were still in school, and from the leaders in the class tournaments held in the fall. The results of the tournaments were as follows:

Seniors: Winner, Eugénie Goullaud; Runner-up, Frances Delaney.

Juniors: Winner, Betty Richey; Runner-up, Evelyn Abbey.

Sophomores: Winner, Rosalind Badaracco; Runner-up, Pearl Levin.

Under the tutelage of Mrs. Wightman, who practised with the teams during the winter, everyone improved, and much new material was found.
